Commodities:

- WTI crude oil futures rose to $73.5 per barrel on Tuesday, recovering from a six-month low due to renewed focus on supply issues and a market rebound. Concerns about escalating Middle East tensions, particularly Iran's threats of retaliation against Israel and the US, have raised fears of supply disruptions.
- Gold steadied around $2,410 per ounce on Tuesday after declining over 1% in the previous session. The metal's upside bias remained intact, supported by its safe-haven appeal as markets became more risk-averse.
- Malaysian palm oil futures were below MYR 3,770 per tonne, falling for the second session to notch their lowest level in six months as contracts for rival oils on the Dalian and CBoT markets tumbled while ringgit slipped further. Market participants also stayed vigilant ahead of crucial data this week from key buyer China.
